++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Further heavy showers, but also some sunny spells.

Today:
Cloudy start in some eastern areas, but sunny spells developing, before showers develop once again. Some heavy, thundery showers with hail by afternoon, focused in eastern, southern and central areas, probably fewer in the west by then. A little warmer.

Tonight:
Showers easing with clear spells developing, although further showers into the southwest later. Cloudier in the far north with rain at times. Possible rural frost some northern areas.

Tuesday:
Rain in the far north edging south into mainland Scotland and turning showery. Elsewhere, another day of sunshine and showers, heaviest with risk of thunder in the south.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Further heavy showers for southern areas Wednesday, before a fine and chilly night. Becoming unsettled from the west Thursday, with strong winds and rain developing, this lasting through Friday.
